

Kevin is a phenomenal coach with tremendous experience and character. On issues of strategy and human resources, his experience and advice greatly assisted our organization during some challenging times. He helped me better manage the performance of the organization, and eventually negotiate the sale of the business to a large multinational corporation.

Kevin's been a CEO himself. What he tells you is based on experience, not theory. The 3-1-Q model showed us how to break down our entire planning process, so that every quarter we know exactly where we are. We understand much better how our business is really doing and how much better we could be doing, and we can clearly define accountability. It's been invaluable to planning and attaining success and provides a valuable, objective measurement for evaluating employee performance. Thanks, Kevin!

He has an extremely positive approach to coaching, and clear ideas about what makes an effective leader. He's been a tremendous help to me and my executive staff.
